WHAT DO MY AARST MEMBERSHIP FEES SUPPORT?

Members of the American Association of Radon Scientists and Technologists receive a variety of benefits, resources, and services to help you be more successful and effective. From advocating industry interests on Capitol Hill, hosting educational opportunities, providing technical resources, to representing members on state policy initiatives- AARST works on your behalf.

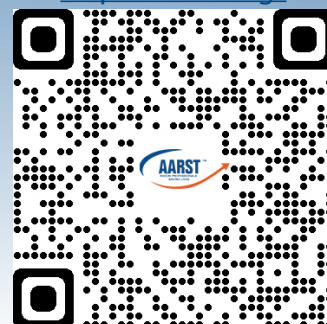

The AARST Government Affairs team maintains a strong and vital presence representing the radon industry before Congress, key federal agencies and national organizations. Government Affairs also serves as the go-to technical resource for chapters and members in shaping state public policy.

A COMMUNITY OF RADON PROFESSIONALS SAVING LIVES

The AARST community consists of members across the country and overseas. Members include radon professionals, advocates, educators, trainers, and students.

Members work together for change in radon policy, measurement, and mitigation while ensuring technicians in their communities are certified, licensed, and working to the highest standards of practice.
